

January 7, 2009

Dear Educator,

Four years ago Kentucky State University began the stewardship of 300 acres in southern Henry County. The KSU Environmental Education Center is located 12.5 miles north of Frankfort on US 421. We hope to provide the students of our service area excellent opportunities to learn about the environment through activities, study projects, and career exploration.

It is Kentucky State University's honor and privilege to work with the schools in our service area. Our intention is to become a leader for Kentucky in environmental education; we will greatly benefit from your feedback as educators.

Beginning in the 2008-2009 school year we hope to offer all students, including those with disabilities, the opportunity to enjoy the outdoor classroom. We will have several learning stations and a dendrology trail available for our visitors. Kentucky State University's Environmental Education Center hopes to allow students to gain a certain level of respect and appreciation for the environment. We hope to show students the many different potential career paths and personal wonders the environment has to offer.

For students with disabilities as well as classes in our service area who can not make the trip to the EEC, we offer Kentucky State University's Mobile Environmental Education Center. This mobile center will highlight the learning opportunities available at Kentucky State University's Environmental Education Center. We look forward to serving you. Please feel free to contact me to arrange a field trip or a visit from the Mobile Environmental Education Center.

Please accept this formal invitation for the school year beginning August 2009 to visit Kentucky State University's Environmental Education Center.

Cordially,

William E. Stilwell (Wes)
Coordinator and Manager of the Environmental Education Center
william.stilwell@ksu.edu
502-597-5089